

IVEY'S

our university shop

knows how to cater to a young man's taste, with clothing that is slim, trim, youthful . . . and, better yet . . . moderately priced! Visit us often!

Ivey's university shop, street floor

On a picnic, little Walter strayed away from his parents and became lost in the woods. He wandered around for a long time and finally, becoming frightened, decided to pray.

"Dear Lord," he prayed as he spread his hands out fervently, "I'm lost. Please help me to find my way out of here."

As he was praying, a little bird happened to fly over and dropped something squarely into the middle of Walter's outstretched hand.

"Oh, please, Lord," he begged, "don't hand me that. Really, I am lost."

PUBLIC RELATIONS RELEASE TWO

Once there was a student who was a social drinker. In order that he might get roaringly social whenever he pleased, he kept a small phial hidden in his drawer, carefully hidden from the eyes of the High Tribunal and from the eyes of his janitor. One day a pledge, while rifling the gentleman's drawers for loose laundry coupons, came upon the phial. Unaccustomed to facing such an unyielding situation, he was immediately torn between honor and common sense. With a loftiness that betrayed his pious upbringing he confiscated the treasure and resolved to present it to the High Tribunal as evidence. But the gentleman, who had been sitting across the hall in the head all the time, observed what had taken place. At this point he too was torn between alternatives. Should he surrender himself to The Tribunal, or should he attempt to reason with the pledge? Finally he discarded both possibilities and, transcending all bounds of human nature, resolved to report the pledge for theft of the phial. On trial day it further came to light that the pledge's janitor had taken a nip from Exhibit "A" while it lay concealed in the freshman dorm. Amid much prayer and weeping, the High Tribunal shipped the two boys and sentenced the janitor to a slow death.

Moral: For working in mysterious ways, the Law runs God a close second.

CREATIVE PROMOTIONAL AND COMMERCIAL PRINTING

Herald Press

A Division of Package Products Co., Inc.

Charlotte, N. C.

THE

WM. R. BARRINGER

•

HOME OF THE HORNETS' NEST AND FINE FOODS

•

OTHER BARRINGER HOTELS

Hotel Columbia
Columbia, S. C.

Hotel Richmond
Augusta, Ga.

1st Phi Gam: Was it crowded at Hatti's last night?

2nd Phi Gam: Not under my table.