

Olson: Drink Abuse?

To The Editor:

I personally think that drinking on campus has been needed for a long time for a variety of reasons, none of which have been expressed before. However, now that on-campus drinking is a reality I believe that too many students are abusing their new freedom.

I'm not knocking those students who see the value of alcohol as a means to escape from reality into a world of oblivious stupor, but I do feel that they should show some responsibility in the disposal of their empty beer cans and whiskey bottles.

After last weekend I was disappointed in those who littered the campus and the town with the empty containers of their spirit friends. This is a small point, but it needs correcting.

Bill Olson, '69
Davidson College