

FOREWORD

"Let's look at the record." -- Al "Happy Warrior" Smith (reform governor, first Catholic to run for President)

There's no hidden story behind this booklet -- I wrote it because we pro-lifers need something like it. I'm a writer by trade, so I guess I'm as good a man for the job as any.

Last year, I did some research on the abortionists of a mill my group was picketing. It took me a while to cut thru the cobwebs, the fog and the red tape surrounding the public records, but once I did, I was pleasantly surprised at the amount of dirt that existed on the three abortionists I looked into. In fact, the amount of negative material on these butchers was so great, I had to take a good amount of time off from work to follow it. I also had to send a couple of woman friends of mine to the courts to complete the research.

Now, none of these women had any investigation experience, so I wrote them some instructions on how to do what was needed. They used these instructions, and their own common sense, and hauled in a lot of dirty laundry on my targets. When I discussed the women's work with another friend, he suggested I write a guide to help other pro-lifers investigate and expose the abortionists of their choice.

So I did. I summed up my past experiences, and added the specific lessons my friends and I learned to produce a book that any pro-lifer in any state can use. I kept the text simple, and concentrated on the areas where we can find the greatest amount of dirt in the shortest time. If enough of us investigate and expose abortionists we know, we will kill the businesses of some and seriously wound the businesses of many more. No problem. In fact, let's kill the businesses of all of them. Misery loves company!

I dedicate this book to the following people, who have inspired me immensely:

To Harriet Tubman, the Black woman who personally led several hundred slaves to freedom as a "conductor" of the Underground Railroad. She repeatedly broke the immoral slave laws of this country because her conscience made her obey God's law instead. She proved that people without formal training, money or power can still do an enormous amount of good. And to Abraham Lincoln, emancipator and martyr. He finished the job of freeing America's slaves.

To Simon Wiesenthal, the famous Nazi hunter. He overcame great obstacles to bring these enemies of humanity to justice. We, as right-to-lifers, are fighting against selfish elitists who have mindsets similar to those of Hitler, Goering, Himmler, and Goebbels.

To my grandpas, Charlie Sherlock and Leo Hurley. Both men were Irishmen; both men were Chicago policemen in the 1920s; both men suffered career-ending wounds in the line of duty. Grandpa Charlie, a little detective with more guts than any one man should be allowed to have, used his street smarts to nail many a mobster. Grandpa Leo, a hulking beat cop with the heart of a lion, once jumped a squad car across a rising drawbridge to collar a carload of criminals. The cunning of Grandpa Charlie and the relentlessness of Grandpa Leo are weapons we all must pray for to use in our fight against the abortionists.

And, finally, to my friend Kirt Higdon, a calm, rational man with lots of dedication and a good sense of humor. A sidewalk counselor, he recruited me into right-to-life work. It was he who suggested I write this book. He edited it, and he also helped produce it.
